

WHY USE TCU'S LAND ACKNOWLEDGMENT?

● It's more than a statement ●

Fosters recognition of how colonization of Native Americans and their lands has shaped our university's policies, practices, curricula, and activities

Affirms and empowers Native Americans at TCU and prompts conversations on the presence or absence of Native Americans in TCU's personnel, curricula, goals, and activities

Creates the conditions of trust necessary to innovatively partner with Native American peoples and communities

Prepares students to enter into ethically responsible relationships and partnerships with Native Americans in their chosen fields

Leads us to ask ethical questions about who we are as a university and as individuals within this community and what we want to strive to be

Meets students' request to have faculty include the Land Acknowledgment on syllabi as expressed in a SGA resolution in 2022
